Not illustrated. 1871 Excerpt: ...1847. trievably compressed, and its pulsations arrested before the head could possibly be extracted, is the safety of the child utterly hopeless? I believe not. Long ago, Pugh and Morlanne recommended a practice that has been latterly followed by Bigelow and others, and which, I believe, is calculated in some instances to enable us to continue the life of the child, by continuing its respiratory function, whilst we go on exerting, from time to time, those cautious yet decided means, which we have seen Dr. Denman recommending, for effecting the complete extraction of the obstructed head. The means to which I allude consist in exciting pulmonary respiration in the half-born child, now that its placental respiration is stopped, and in making it continue that vital process by the action of the lungs, now that it is prevented from being exercised by the medium of the placenta and umbilical cord. "When the parts are well made," says Pugh,¹ "and the child in proportion, happy the case! It will come then any way; the arm being brought down, the head only remains to be extracted, which must be done with as much expedition as possible, as indeed the arms ought to be; for, consider, when the child has passed the navel, the circulation between it and the mother is stopped from the pressure of the umbilical rope; you must then introduce the fingers of your left hand into the vagina, under the child's breast, and put the first and second fingers into the child's mouth pretty far; so far, however, that you are able to press down the child's tongue in such a manner, that by keeping your hand hollow, and pressing it upon the mother's rectum the air may have access to the larynx; you will soon perceive the thorax expand, as the air gets into the lungs. By this...
